FXDD is required to inform its clients at the outset about its policy on the use of Expert Advisors (EA) in line with MFSA Part BI: Rules applicable to Investment Services License Holders that qualify as MiFID Firms and MFSA Conduct of Business Rulebook.

Definition of Expert Advisor

An Expert Advisor is a program capable of automating the analytical and trading processes in the terminal/trading platform (e.g. MetaTrader4), without any direct human involvement. All tasks are performed automatically by the EA following previously set parameters.

Use of Expert Advisors on trading Platforms

FXDD offers its customers the possibility to receive signals from regulated entities that they can choose to follow at their own discretion.

It is the client's responsibility to understand the functionality, technical requirements, advantages and disadvantages of any chosen EA. FXDD does not offer any customer and/or technical support for EA chosen/used by the client. It is the client's sole responsibility to ensure the proper use of the EA, including any testing and compatibility with FXDD's platform.
